FROM YOUR HOST

When you hear that guides from South Florida are traveling to a Tarpon destination, it tends to grab your attention. It hits differently. Located on the Southwest corner of the island of Puerto Rico, the village of Boqueron is home to a few thousand residents, countless hungry tarpon, and No Name Lodge.

The fishing here is centered on two outstanding species, with tarpon and permit both found in great numbers. Anglers of all skill levels will enjoy the variety of fishing at No Name Lodge, with plentiful shots at aggressive, mid-size tarpon being the main attraction, and the options of technical wade-fishing for tailing permit or chasing large migratory tarpon being available for those with the skills and nerve to take them on.

On top of thrilling fishing, there is an ease and convenience to this program that makes it especially interesting to many of us U.S.-based anglers. No passport is required for US citizens to travel to Puerto Rico and no customs to deal with on the outbound or return. For guests that may not have the full array of big game tackle, the lodge provides top-shelf equipment for guest use. You can hop on a flight with little more than a change of clothes, driver's license, sunglasses, hat and sunscreen, and they will make sure you are outfitted for success on the flats.

ABOUT YOUR HOST

Longtime Frontiers trip host and photographer, Barry Beck, travels far and wide to follow his love for fly fishing, nature photography and adventure travel. Based in Pennsylvania, Barry is a professional photographer, writer, fly-fishing travel and African photo safaris host while also operating his own stock photography business. Barry is well-known in the fly-fishing, photography, and travel industries, and possesses a stellar reputation for his skill, knowledge, and expertise born from a lifetime of related experiences.

Each day, you can expect short runs in modern skiffs. Fishing at No Name Lodge will feel familiar to anyone who has fished south Florida. In the evenings, guests experience the local cuisine and culture of Puerto Rico. After the 5-minute walk into the village of Boqueron, your guides and hosts will accompany you to one of the local restaurants. Although dinners are not included in the package price, the meals and beverages are delicious and affordable. Guests are free to branch off and enjoy the local nightlife on their own, or you can stay with your guide and return to the lodge.

I hope you can join me for this thrilling flats program and authentic island experience.

Sincerely,

Barry Beck

WHAT TO EXPECT

No Name Fly Lodge primarily targets tarpon and permit. Guests can expect a fun, free-flowing program that consists of seldom-fished waters and nights full of island culture and cuisine. This program consistently produces excellent opportunities to fish for hungry tarpon with experienced guides. Our anglers love the number of shots they get at unpressured juvenile and adult tarpon, as well as the opportunity for shots at tailing permit on the flats. The lodge is located in Boquerón, PR, a small village on the southwest corner of the island, with colorful architecture and an exciting downtown to explore after days on the water. Travel is easy, and because Puerto Rico is a U.S. Territory, there are no passports needed and no customs to clear.

- ▶ No Name Lodge has some of the best Tarpon fishing in the world. These fish face less angling pressure than most other destinations, making for more cooperative, fly-friendly fish.
- ▶ This program offers a wide variety of settings for a range of angler skill and weather conditions. There are mangrove areas that are protected from the wind as well as open flats similar to those in the Keys.
- ▶ Permit fishing is often done on foot in the surf, while tarpon fishing is mostly done from the skiffs.
